The Ohio History Service AmeriCorps Program returns for a third year of supporting community and local history throughout Ohio. Local History Corps members across the state are available as a resource for local history organizations. They can assist with volunteer recruitment and management, event planning, multi-organizational partnerships, and K-12 education outreach. In addition, this year the Historic Preservation Corps features four community surveyors who will be adding underrepresented buildings to the Ohio Historic Inventory. Meet your AmeriCorps members!

Local History Corps:

Christie Chapman returns to serve at Heritage Ohio, acting as a preservationist in the field. She plans to bring her knowledge of interior design, historic tax credit projects, and hands-on preservation techniques to facilitate preservation education and to assist in protecting Ohio’s cultural resources.

Michael Craft serves Cincinnati and Southwest Ohio at the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center. He will be hosting a regional symposium for the area’s museums and historical sites, assisting with Morgan’s Raid commemoration events.

Jennifer Gray returns to serve at Preservation Ohio and Downtown Mansfield Inc. She looks forward to reaching out to individuals in the community and promoting the importance of economic revitalization and the preservation of North Central Ohio’s past.

Cathy Harrelson is serving Southwest Ohio at the Quaker Heritage Center of Wilmington College. Her projects include continuing the Heritage Center’s successful Lincoln Day for students and Lincoln Dinner for adults, as well as Morgan’s Raid commemoration events.

Tennile Jackson is serving in the Collections and Digital Services Department at the Ohio Historical Society. She is excited to help launch collections management workshops, which will provide OHS historic site managers and their volunteers with information regarding proper object handling techniques.

Richard Donegan is serving Northeast Ohio, returning to the Oberlin Heritage Center. During his term he will be a member of a committee focused on promoting tourism in Lorain County, conducting a survey of Civil War monuments, helping with oral history projects, and developing programs regarding the temperance movement in Oberlin.

Jonathan Kinkead is working with Youngstown State University’s History Department and the Youngstown Historical Center of Industry and Labor (YHCIL) to serve Northeast Ohio. Some of his projects for the year include educational outreach for YHCIL and District 4 History Day.

The first two areas have taken the bulk of my time, but I have been getting out and interacting with the community too. And I have new inspiration after hearing Dan Shilling’s keynote address at the Ohio Local History Alliance’s recent annual meeting. I am finding his book, Civic Tourism: The Poetry and Politics of Place equally inspiring and ambitious. Public history, by the very term, is as much about history as it is about people and community. What I love about Shilling’s premise is that tourism should benefit not just your heritage institution, but the community as a whole. He believes that tourism, managed and marketed properly, can save the world. Sound grandioso? Maybe. But what if he is right? How many of us have long believed that a study of and appreciation for history, especially local history, has the power to create amazing change in our communities? Shilling is up front about saying that what he is proposing is not easy to accomplish. And given the time constraints we all operate under, do we really have time to forge such deep partnerships and instigate community upheaval? I guess that is something we have to reckon for ourselves. But it is a tantalizing concept, and one I am beginning to explore in my neighborhood.

Melissa Luthman returns to serve West Central Ohio at the Logan County Historical Society. She is excited to continue working with local historical societies on commemorations, volunteer recruitment, K-12 education outreach, and heritage tourism efforts.

Jacob Masters is serving his second year at the Dennison Depot. By focusing on event planning and marketing, he intends to create a lasting connection between organizations and people and their area’s rich history.

Devin Miles returns for a third year at Heritage Ohio. He is looking forward to working on projects that cultivate and promote cultural tourism around the state.

Misti Spillman is serving Central Ohio at the Ohio Historical Society. She is focusing on cemeteries, including creating a toolkit about cemetery preservation and hosting a cemetery preservation workshop for interested individuals.

Doug Versaw returns to serve at Down-town Mansfield, Inc. He will be promoting historic preservation and community revitalization. He also hopes to promote historic preservation as a means for community and economic development.

Brenna Walker is entering her second year of service in North Central Ohio at the Maritime Museum of Sandusky. This year she hopes to work on volunteer recruitment, events, and grant writing.

Carolyn Wavrin is serving in the Collections and Digital Services Departments at the Ohio Historical Society. She has an interest in helping local history organizations with collections care and in using digital media to document and preserve history (especially oral history and aural/visual documentary).

Deb Wickerham serves Northwest Ohio at the Hancock Historical Museum. She is looking forward to creating hands-on history activities for teachers and students and creating exciting historical events.

Dayton Willison is serving at the Sunday Creek Associates for the Little Cities of Black Diamonds. He is most excited about the Tecumseh Theater restoration that will give the public a place to experience history in another engaging way—on the stage.

Historic Preservation Corps:

Jennifer Gariety is serving as a community surveyor based at the Piqua Public Library. She will work to create architectural surveys in the eastern section of downtown known as the “Piqua Bend,” creating a study about the impact of the Great Flood of 1913 on the area.

Alexa McDonough is a community surveyor with the Cleveland Restoration Society. She is currently investigating survey opportunities to highlight aspects of African American history to save significant properties from destruction in Cleveland’s historically black neighborhoods.

Andrew Neutzling is returning to server as a community surveyor at the Columbus Landmarks Foundation in Columbus, Ohio. He will be researching and recording 150 examples of mid-century modern architecture, focusing on traditionally underrepresented groups in Columbus.

Jessica R. Wobig is serving her third year as a community surveyor at the Cleveland Landmarks Commission for the City of Cleveland. This year she will be leading a team of volunteers in surveying the Slavic Village area and evaluating mid-20th century college/university campuses for National Register eligibility.

For contact information for the AmeriCorps member in your area, visit http://www.ohiohistory.org/local-history-office/americorps. This program is supported in part by a grant from ServeOhio, the state’s commission on service and volunteerism. Americorps is a service program of the Corporation for National and Community Service.

Thank You Year Two Members!

Year two of the Ohio History Service Corps was a success, with members “getting things done” across Ohio through 34,000 hours of service. Thank you to all our members for their hard work and dedication last year:

A detailed description of each of the award winners will follow in the next issue of The Local Historian.

Museum Assessment Program
Now Accepting Applications!

AAM’s Museum Assessment Program’s (MAP) next application deadline is coming up on December 1. MAP provides a way for museums to understand their strengths and weaknesses, to see if they are meeting current best practices in the field, to set goals and priorities, and to get concrete suggestions from a peer reviewer. It can also be a great first step in working towards AAM accreditation. There are four different assessment types: organizational assessment, collections stewardship assessment, community engagement assessment, and leadership assessment. Each gives an in-depth look at that area of a museum’s functions. The year-long process involves completing a self-study, an evaluation by a peer reviewer, and implementation of the peer reviewer’s recommendations. The program is confidential.

Any non-profit museum with the equivalent of one full-time staff member (paid or volunteer) and that is open to the public for at least 90 days a year is eligible to participate in a MAP. AAM states that 49% of museums that participate have a budget of less than $250,000 a year, and museums with annual expenses of less than $125,000 can participate free of charge. Institutions can also receive additional benefits, including a MAP bookshelf of resources from the AAM press, access to AAM’s Museum Essentials webinar series, and access to AAM’s Information Center. For more information or to apply, visit http://www.aam-us.org/museumresources/map/
Dear Local Historian

Q  We have vertical files that we want to rearrange for better user access. Do you have any suggestions for subject headings?

A  Patrons will have an easier time accessing your collections if the subject headings are consistent. But even with smaller collections, the number of subjects can quickly become difficult to manage. One resource that may be helpful is the list of subject headings from the Library of Congress.

Library of Congress (LC) subject headings, which are available for free at http://authorities.loc.gov, are used throughout the U.S. and in other countries as well. For example, WorldCat (www.worldcat.org), the shared catalog used by libraries and institutions around the world, depends on the consistency and uniformity of LC subject headings to bring together numerous works that address similar subjects.

Today’s search engines draw together resources from all over the Internet. Using the same headings that are used by research institutions around the world may help an online user discover the resources in your collection.

Of course, many local history groups may not be putting their subject schemes online, and they may not be adding records to a shared resource like WorldCat. The LC subject headings can still provide good examples. Take Civil War battles, for example. Do you construct the heading as “Battle of Gettysburg” or “Gettysburg, Battle of”? Do you include the state in which the battle occurred and the dates on which it occurred? The staff at the Library of Congress has already made these decisions, so why not follow their example? (They went with “Gettysburg, Battle of, Gettysburg, Pa., 1863.”)

Library of Congress subject headings can also provide useful examples of other headings that people may use to search for a particular topic or person. You can then consider using these additional terms as cross-references in your subject scheme. For example, Sherwood Anderson sometimes wrote under the pseudonym “Buck Fever.” If you have collections pertaining to Anderson, you may also want to have a cross-reference to his pseudonym in your subject headings.

Depending on the particulars of your collection, you may also find that adjusting the LC subject headings makes more sense for your institution. For example, if you have many collections pertaining to a particular city or county, you may want to drop the initial place name from the subject heading: instead of “Cuyahoga County (Ohio)–Board of Elections” just “Board of Elections”; instead of “Cuyahoga County (Ohio)–Genealogy” just “Genealogy”; and so on.

For consistency that will benefit you and your patrons, look to a proven resource like LC subject headings for help.

Every fall, The Castle, a historic house museum in Marietta, Ohio, hosts a Victorian Wake and Funeral. The event is thick with theatrical flair; covered with dark decor, dying flowers, and gloomy characters draped in black. Throughout the tour, visitors are escorted from room to room where they encounter actors who explain the traditions and etiquette of Victorian mourning.

The idea of a story is the driving force behind this interactive exhibit, and the result is quite alluring. The incorporation of plot and characters helps provoke emotion, which makes the exhibit more personal and the reaction much stronger. Having a storyline format also helps organize information in a way that is very familiar and easy for the brain to process and retain, making the exhibit more memorable and less intimidating than more stationary exhibits.

While incorporating a storyline into an exhibit can be very rewarding, it can also be tricky. Not every exhibit lends itself easily to the incorporation of plot. Here are some tips on how to use stories to make exhibits more emotionally interactive:

1. Start with advertising. Luckily for us, the modern world is full of easily accessible tools for this. Facebook, Twitter, blogs, email, and good old-fashioned fliers can be used to get the story rolling before the visitor even enters the museum. Use these tools to capture your audience and get them excited about what will happen next. It is important to create mystery, drama, and interest to let visitors know that this is not going to be the average museum exhibit.

2. A bit of confusion is not a bad thing. Remember, some confusion can lead to curiosity, which automatically engages your audience with what is about to happen. Do not reveal your story too early and give away the sense of mystery!

3. Is it really a story? Organize your exhibit carefully. A story has an introduction, climax, and conclusion… and so should your exhibit! This format is what builds suspense and emotion and then ties everything together into something meaningful. You do not necessarily need characters or props; some exhibits only need to be reorganized for a storyline to be revealed.

4. Sometimes you just can’t have everything. The addition of emotion sometimes means that details and facts need to be limited. A storyline is not worth having if it is buried under a pile of names and dates. You have to make a decision: how much information is vital to the exhibit and what is the best way to present it? Handouts at the end of an exhibit can help fill in the facts for those who are interested in learning more.

Want More Information?
AASLH has a technical leaflet, “Telling a Story in 100 Words: Effective Label Copy” with even more information on incorporating a story into exhibits. You can order this and any of AASLH’s other technical leaflets at: http://www.aaslh.org/leaflets.htm.
The Ohio Historical Society has launched the “Creative Learning Factory” website in time for the 2012-2013 school year. The Creative Learning Factory offers innovative professional development opportunities for K-12 teachers and museum professionals through webinars, interactive video conferencing, and face-to-face workshops. The website allows people to register for upcoming seminars and webinars and provides school districts and museums with more information about working with the Creative Learning Factory.

“The Creative Learning Factory is what cutting-edge professional development looks like,” said Jackie Barton, Director of Education and Outreach at the Ohio Historical Society. Its new take on professional development has earned the program local, state, and national support. The Creative Learning Factory has been awarded grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities, as well as numerous state and local funders.

While the Ohio Historical Society has provided Ohio social studies teachers with resources and training for decades, it wanted to expand its educational offerings to topics across the humanities disciplines and beyond the borders of Ohio through professional development. “We want to meet the needs of today’s educators and students. The focus of education in the United States has shifted to focusing on the skills needed for success in the modern workplace” said Stacia Kuceyeski, Educational Partnerships and Outreach Manager. “The historical thinking skills that have been at the heart of our programming address many of these 21st-century skills and can provide teachers with strategies to promote student success across the curriculum.”

The Creative Learning Factory works with school districts to provide customized “hands-on, minds-on” professional development for K-12 teachers. Cincinnati Public Schools, Hilliard City Schools, and the San Bernardino, California School District are among those that have hosted professional development seminars by the Creative Learning Factory. The staff of the Creative Learning Factory also serves the needs of individual educators through live webinars. Some past webinar topics include “Ohio’s Academic Content Standards,” “Vampires in Popular Culture,” and “Free Speech and the Classroom.”

The Creative Learning Factory also provides professional development for its peers in the field of museums and public history. With experience in archives management, exhibit development, project planning, evaluation, and museum education, the Creative Learning Factory staff have presented at a variety of conferences to provide museum professionals with inventive ways to incorporate school and educational outreach across an institution.

To learn more about the Creative Learning Factory, its programs, and its staff, visit http://www.creativelearningfactory.org/ or call (614) 297-2574, (800) 686-6124.
Heritage Ohio, with the generous support of the Jeffris Family Foundation, will host a two-day Fundraising Workshop in Columbus on February 25 & 26, 2013. There are many deserving projects in need of funding here in Ohio, but many can struggle to make their case. This two-day fundraising workshop will be very interactive and train board, staff, and volunteers. Topics will include board development, case statements, and annual campaigns. There will also be two lunch-time panels designed to engage participants in a discussion of successful models in fundraising. Panelists will share how they have gone from ordinary to extraordinary fundraisers and share their best and worst solicitation stories.

The workshop is designed to be fun, inspirational, and to move your projects forward. In order to be a more effective workshop, participants will be expected to attend in small groups; at least two members from each organization registering must attend.

Heritage Ohio is pleased to be partnering with the Ohio Historical Society, the Ohio Local History Alliance, and Goettler and Associates in planning this workshop. For more information, visit www.heritageohio.org or call (614) 258-6200.

Association for Living History, Farm, and Agricultural Museums
2013 Conference Call for Papers

The Association for Living History, Farm, and Agricultural Museums (ALHFAM) Conference is coming to Ohio. On June 14-18, 2013, Hale Farm & Village, a museum of the Western Reserve Historical Society, will host the 2013 ALHFAM Annual Meeting and Conference.

Guided by the theme “Bringing it All to the Table: Feed Your Body, Feed Your Mind,” museum professionals everywhere are encouraged to gather with colleagues around a common table. Here conference attendees will acquaint themselves with old friends and new associates, while enjoying good company, good food, and rousing conversation.

The 2013 conference will address issues and concerns currently facing living history and agricultural museums. Proposals for presentations, sessions, papers, and workshops are now being accepted. Proposals should focus on individual, institutional, and communal achievements that serve up innovative programming initiatives or organizational efforts that are creative, essential, and relevant in today’s marketplace. How do museums cultivate and nurture civic engagement for greater involvement and investment in their organizations? What can we glean from new demographic shifts, technological applications, and curriculum schemes? What are the current and best practices of living history interpretation and museum methodology that effect organizational richness? What are the processes for dishing up success? How do we deliver the goods to our audiences and reap the rewards of a good yield in the face of new challenges and opportunities?

The submission deadline is December 1, 2012. For more information, visit ALHFAM’s website: www.alhfam.org.
News from the Regions

In 100 words or less, do you have outstanding news to share about your organization? Please email it to your regional representative for the next issue of The Local Historian. Contact information for the representatives in your region is on page 2 of this issue. Of course, you are welcome to forward your news directly to the editor of The Local Historian at arohmiller@ohiohistory.org. Rather than serving as a calendar of events, items for News from the Regions are chosen to inspire, connect, and educate the Alliance’s members all over Ohio and celebrate notable and imitation-worthy accomplishments of Alliance members.

Region 1
Allen, Defiance, Fulton, Hancock, Hardin, Henry, Lucas, Putnam, Van Wert, Williams, and Wood Counties Region 1 celebrates the opening of a new museum in Port Clinton – the Liberty Aviation Museum! Housed at the Erie-Ottawa Regional Airport, the 23,000 square-foot museum showcases American aviation in the years between World War I and World War II. Exhibits also include a World War II patrol torpedo boat, a vintage diner from Pennsylvania, and memorabilia from the era. The Tri-Motor Heritage Foundation also moved its restoration of a 1929 Ford Tri-Motor airplane to the museum and plans to have workshops that will allow the public to help with some of the plane’s restoration. For more information, visit http://www.libertyaviationmuseum.org/.

Region 2
Ashland, Crawford, Erie, Huron, Marion, Morrow, Ottawa, Richland,Sandusky, Seneca, and Wyandot Counties The Clyde Heritage League is engaged in a preservation project of the landmark 1882 City Hall which anchors the south end of downtown Clyde. Brick and mortar deterioration is being addressed, and the wood cupola, on which rests a golden eagle weathervane, is being repaired. The League has also recently completed an exterior wood stabilization and paint project on the Grace Episcopal Church building, built in 1886, home of the Clyde Museum since 1987. For more information on these projects, go to http://www.clydeheritageleague.org/

Region 3
Cuyahoga, Lake, Lorain, Medina, and Summit Counties The Medina County Historical Society has had a very successful summer of local fundraising. Two luncheons with speakers, teas, an antique show and yard sale, a band concert, and hot dog sales netted the society just under $5,000. As a result, the society will soon be back online! Additionally, the Letha E. House Foundation gave the society a grant to pay for a new heating and cooling system. Over the years this local foundation has helped the society pay for the exterior restoration of the John Smart House, finishing the attic, house painting, one half of a new roof, and a computer system. For more information, visit www.medinahistorical.com.

Region 4
Ashtabula, Geauga, Mahoning, Portage, and Trumbull Counties Prolific Salem historian, Dale E. Shaffer wanted to make Salem history available to the public. To that end, he left his estate to the Salem Historical Society to build a research library. It has been done, with ribbon-cutting and dedication held on August 7, 2012. This building, the historical society’s third, is styled after the Salem Carnegie Public Library, as he requested. It houses an elegant library reference area, society offices, a public meeting room, and an extensive display of objects and history of Salem industries and transportation. To learn more, visit http://www.salemsicalsociety.org/.

Region 5
Carroll, Columbiana, Harrison, Holmes, Jefferson, Stark, Tuscarawas, and Wayne Counties The Dover Historical Society has partnered with the Dover Public Library to present “Making Sense of the Civil War: Let’s Talk About It!” Made possible by a grant from the Ohio Humanities Council, the program included five discussions of three Civil War books: March, by Geraldine Brooks, Crossroads of Freedom by James McPherson, and America’s War, edited by Edward Ayers. Dr. Kelly Selby, professor at Walsh University, served as the project’s humanities scholar and has tied local Civil War history into the discussion. For more information, visit www.doverhistory.org.

News from the Regions

Region 6
Delaware, Fairfield, Fayette, Franklin, Knox, Licking, Madison, Perry, Pickaway, and Union Counties
The Heisey Glass Museum had an incredible end to its “Gordon and Darlene Cochran National Heisey Glass Museum Endowment Matching Funds Challenge,” exceeding its goal and raising $507,521. Launched on April 8, 2011, the museum set a goal to raise $500,000 by July 31, 2012. Each contribution was generously matched by the Cochrans, members from Redmond, Washington. Not only did the challenge raise money for the museum, but it also brought all members closer together as study clubs around the country held their own mini-matches. To learn more, go to www.heiseymuseum.org.

Region 7
Auglaize, Champaign, Clark, Darke, Greene, Logan, Mercer, Miami, Montgomery, Preble, and Shelby Counties
The Shelby County Historical Society recently hosted a “Native American Gathering and Encampment” at the Shelby County Fairgrounds. The encampment featured a lecture by Dr. Herman Viola on Thomas McKenney, an early Superintendent of Indian Affairs, as well as crafts, storytelling, dancing, and drumming. There was also a day set aside just for school programs. In addition, the museum curated a Native American exhibit. The exhibit featured artifacts loaned from community members and a hand-made wiki-up and lean-to. For more information, go to www.shelbycountyhistory.org.

Region 8
Adams, Brown, Butler, Clermont, Clinton, Hamilton, Highland, and Warren Counties
The Clermont County Collaborative of Historical Societies sponsored its 14th annual Museum Day on September 16. Eleven historic sites across the county were open to the public free of charge.

Region 9
Athens, Gallia, Hocking, Jackson, Lawrence, Meigs, Pike, Ross, Scioto, and Vinton Counties
The Hocking County Historical Society’s Logan and Hocking County, a new publication written by historian Judy Maniskas, has been a great success and has given the local society new interest as well as additional income. Printed in the fall of 2011 by Arcadia Publishing Company, sales have been steady with the first run of 1,200 copies sold out. A boost in public relations for the society was evident when the author appeared on WOUB-TV in Athens, Ohio. Maniskas also spoke to several local organizations regarding her research. Logan and Hocking County is the first concise history written about the area in over 50 years. To learn more, go to www.hockingcountyhistoricalsociety.com.

Region 10
Belmont, Coshocton, Guernsey, Monroe, Morgan, Muskingum, Noble, and Washington Counties
The Friends of the Museums in Marietta, Ohio has generously offered to help restore a shanty boat that was recently donated to the Sons and Daughters of Pioneer Rivermen (S&D). The early 1900s house boat was donated by the Schoonover family of Gallipolis. The Ohio River Museum and the S&D will be working together to restore the roof, floor, and windows. It will then be put on exhibit at the Ohio River Museum. For more information, visit http://campusmartiusmuseum.org/river.

Last month a long-anticipated event took place: the Ohio History Fund application form was posted online. This marked another milestone for a quest that has been the focus of the Ohio Local History Alliance for more than six years. The deadline for submitting applications was Monday, October 29, 2012.

The need for support of local history initiatives has never been greater. Since January 1 of this year, more than 17,000 Ohioans have contributed around $150,000 to the Ohio History Fund, which will begin to meet some of those needs. We hope that as word of the History Fund spreads and taxpayers see the Fund benefiting projects in their communities contributions will grow significantly in the coming years.

As OHS set about to create the framework for this local history grants program, we wanted to ensure that local needs were taken into consideration at every step along the way. We created an advisory group with representatives from: Heritage Ohio, Preservation Ohio, the Ohio Historical Records Advisory Board, the Ohio Genealogical Society, the Ohio Local History Alliance (Bremen Area Historical Society, Summit County Historical Society, and Wood County Historical Center & Museum), and the Society of Ohio Archivists. We also looked to the Ohio Arts Council and the Ohio Humanities Council for guidance regarding state-wide grant programs.

This advisory group has met regularly during the past year and has provided exceptional advice. There was a strong feeling that above all else, the grants should be competitive. The advisory group recognized that the amount of available money will be insufficient to meet all the needs of local history across Ohio, and that the only fair way to award grants would be on a competitive basis. The advisors also believed that the grants should require a local match, either in-kind or in cash, as a way to leverage additional private support.

Last, the advisory group recommended that grants be focused in three areas: organizational development, programs and collections, and bricks and mortar. Organizational development grants will help build capacity through such vehicles as training for board and staff, professional assistance with organizational issues, or improving governance structures. Programs and collections encompass a variety of projects that further the study, recordation, interpretation, publication and dissemination of historical information, engagement of communities in history, or conservation of historical collections and archives. Bricks and mortar projects can involve the rehabilitation, restoration, protection, or acquisition of historic properties and archaeological sites listed on the National Register of Historic Places or designated by local ordinance; or work related to the preservation of historical or archival collections regardless of the building’s historic status; or new construction dedicated to the preservation of historical or archival collections.

This fall OHS will convene another group of representatives from history-related organizations across Ohio to review and to recommend grant recipients. OHS is providing program support and administration, and the Executive Director of OHS will receive and review the list of recommended grant recipients before making the final award decision.

This grants program would never have materialized without the advocacy and support of OLHA. Your individual and collective voices over the past six years eventually carried the day. On behalf of Ohio History, I thank you for your passion and dedication that made this grants program a reality. I look forward to visiting with many you in 2013 and beyond to see the final fruits of this program benefit local history across the state.
