Creating Educational Programs that Work

By Melanie Janiszewski, AmeriCorps Civil War 150 Leadership Corps Volunteer, Quaker Heritage Center, Wilmington College

Editor’s Note: It’s not too early to start thinking about school programs for this fall. This article offers helpful tips and food for thought!

On February 10, 2012, all of Wilmington’s fourth graders experienced a day of living history at Wilmington College. In six hours, over 250 ten-year-olds saw programs presented by eight organizations and learned about President Lincoln, the Civil War, and President’s Day. The program was offered at no cost to the schools, to Wilmington College, or to the Quaker Heritage Center. Want to know how to create educational programs that work for everyone?

Get the schools on board. First, when determining the content of your program and its audience, you need to become comfortable with the academic standards for history. Once you have decided on a program, talk to your school district’s curriculum director. A curriculum director can be a historical society’s best friend, but you have to speak his or her language. We walked into our meeting with a flyer that listed the academic standards and content statements that would be covered in the single day of programming. We also determined ways to incorporate fourth grade language arts and math standards into supplementary educational materials we created. If the curriculum director is impressed, she will send the word out across the district.

Wilmington’s curriculum director made the decision that all classes and schools in the district would participate, and disseminated our flyer to the schools. She connected us with a teacher looking for experience in curriculum development to hone our educational booklet and obtained the support of the principals and superintendent.

Get the community on board. If your school districts have seen a decrease or elimination of their field trip budgets, speaking the language of academic standards may not be enough. In our meeting with the curriculum director, the Quaker Heritage Center pledged to pay for busing to our location so there was no cost to the schools. We applied for a grant from the county foundation to pay for the busing and were immediately accepted.

Outside of bussing, there are always program costs. For Lincoln Day we looked to the community to fill these needs. A period-inspired dinner with Abraham Lincoln followed by a preview of our exhibit sold out. Several community members who could not attend (Continued on page 3)
President’s Message:

One of my New Year’s resolutions this year was to do a better job of keeping up with the latest news, thoughts, and opinions of people in the museum field. This was easy and fun during the spring when I was able to visit so many interesting museums for our regional meetings. It is hard keeping up with the written stuff. Probably like you, I have enough to do just managing the day-to-day operations of my museum. And with the explosion of social media . . . good heavens! Now, in addition to traditional written stuff, that could potentially have that critical piece of information that will make me jump up from my desk and shout “AHA! I have solved our (fill in the blank) problem.” Nevertheless, I am committed to my resolution, and after six months of diligently setting aside just 20 minutes during (most!) of my workdays, I have noticed a big difference. And while I believe that The Local Historian is one of the best sources for news and information from the field, here are three online sites that I regularly follow and find very useful: www.futureofmuseums.org, This site is produced by the American Association of Museums. They also publish an annual report called TrendsWatch that forecasts a few of the most important issues to which we should be paying attention. The 2012 TrendsWatch is available as a pdf on the website and is well worth the read.

Ohio Local History Alliance 2012
Outstanding Achievement Awards

By Leianne Neff Heppner, Executive Director, Summit County Historical Society, Akron and Bill Lawson, Executive Director, Mahoning Valley Historical Society, Youngstown, Co-Chairs, Ohio Local History Alliance Advocacy and Public Awareness Committee

Now is the time to advocate for your outstanding local historians and local history projects, by nominating them for the Ohio Local History Alliance’s 2012
Outstanding Achievement Awards. Nominations must be postmarked and sent to the Ohio Historical Society’s Local History Office no later than August 1, 2012 to be considered. To get a nomination form, contact the Local History Office at 1-800-858-6878 or (614) 297-2340. You can also email Erin Rickman at erickman@ohiohistory.org. The Alliance presents awards in two categories, Individual Achievement and History Outreach.

Individual Achievement Awards recnize those who have made outstanding contributions to Ohio’s historical societies, history museums, or the understanding and appreciation of state or local history.
Nominees must have been involved in a historical society, museum, or related orga-ization for at least five years and demonstra-strate activity and excellence in more than one area of the organization’s operations.
If the nominee is a teacher, he or she must demonstrate creativity in teaching methods and expertise in local and state history.

History Outreach Awards recognize outstanding local history projects. These must have educational content, have contributed to the promotion and understandning of local and state history, and have had an impact on the community. Nominations will be accepted in the following categories: public programming, media and publications, and exhibits/displays.

A group of reviewers will evaluate all nominations, and it is anticipated that all award winners will be announced by the end of August. Awards will be presented at the Ohio Local History Alliance Awards Luncheon, which will be held in Columbus on Saturday, October 6, 2012 during the Alliance’s Annual Meeting at the Holiday Inn in Worthington. Good luck!

the dinner donated as well. Between our mini-grant for busing, a small grant for public programs attached to our traveling exhibit, and the Lincoln Dinner, the Quaker Heritage Center was able to provide the full of day of programming free of cost.

Get regional partners on board. The Lincoln exhibit at the Quaker Heritage Center was gorgeous, but elementary schools would not have given up a day of class to come see only that. Knowing this, we reached out to other organizations in the region to create a full day of programing. The Lincoln Society of Dayton, Caesar’s Creek Pioneer Village, and four historical interpreters shared their historial acumen with students. The Wilmington Public Library had the children do a craft while talking about their collection of Lincoln and Civil War children’s books.
Grow Food Grow Hope talked about food delivery and gardening then and now. All but two of our programs were volunteered in exchange for press coverage, access to the curriculum developer for Wilmington City Schools, and a great day spent with children. Rather than seeing your peers as competitors, invite them to participate in your program, and help with their programs.

Get Feedback, and Use It! Hard numbbers are the primary language of such key stakeholders as educators, foundations, and the community. When we spoke to our schools, we used statistics from a similar successful educational program to show the potential for increased test scores. In exchange for participation, students were required to complete pre and post tests to ascertain the scholastic value of our programs for next year.
When we went looking for grant money, we estimated the value of services that would be donated by volunteers. When we write next year’s proposals, we will have hard calculations to that effect. Every educator, program giver, and volunteer was also given a survey. The results have already been used to create a plan to improve next year’s event. It is important not only to ask for feedback but to use it, and it is important to share statistics with your stakeholders.

Leverage the Success of Your Peers.
Plans are already underway for next year’s event. The hope is to offer the day of free living history education to the fourth graders not only of Wilmington, but of Clinton County as a whole. If your organization is looking to create a similar educational experience, ask organizations who already have them. We would never have been able to orchestrate Lincoln Day without the assistance of Tilda Philpot at the Shelby County Historical Society, who was happy to spend an hour on the phone with us whenever we called with a list of questions. The least we can do in return is to happily spend an hour answering the questions of anyone who may call us! You can contact the Quaker Heritage Center at (937) 382-6661.
Check Out the New Small Museum Toolkit, A Resource Tailor Made for You!

As a small museum, historical society, or historic site staff person, you wear many hats and have many duties and responsibilities, probably including some areas outside of your expertise or training. Juggling many balls and becoming an expert on all subjects is indeed a challenge with not enough funding, staff, and hours in the day. Information is power, especially when it is geared to an institution like yours. You need a quick reference for staff, board members, and volunteers that makes the process of becoming a sustainable, valued institution less overwhelming. The Small Museum Toolkit is a collection of six books that serve as a launching point to pursue best practices and meet museum standards. These brief volumes address governance, financial management, human resources, audience relations, interpretation, stewardship for small museums and historic sites, and much more. The Small Museum Toolkit, written by thirty-four experienced small museum professionals, helps you define the questions you should be asking, gives you tools to achieve your goals, and guides you where to go for help. The volumes include practical advice, sample policies, procedures and forms, photographs, useful tips and pointers, suggestions of where to go for additional information and appendices.

The books in the Toolkit:

BOOK ONE – Leadership, Mission, and Governance
BOOK TWO – Financial Resource Development and Management
BOOK THREE – Organizational Management
BOOK FOUR – Reaching and Responding to the Audience
BOOK FIVE – Interpretation: Education, Programs, and Exhibits
BOOK SIX – Stewardship: Collections and Historic Preservation

The Small Museum Toolkit was compiled and edited by Cinnamon Catlin-Legutko and Stacy Klingler, who have considerable experience working in small museums. Cinnamon is the chief executive officer of the Abbe Museum in Bar Harbor, Maine and Stacy is the assistant director of local history services at the Indiana Historical Society. The Toolkit was published by AltaMira Press in December 2011. Ohio Local History Alliance Past President Patricia Murphy, who is the executive director of the Oberlin Heritage Center, is the author of “Human Resources Administration: Building An Effective Team,” a chapter in Book Three (Organizational Management). The six-volume Toolkit is available in soft cover, hard cover, and e-book form through AASLH, Amazon, and elsewhere. If your organization does not have the funding to purchase a copy, ask your local library to consider getting it or ask a donor to provide the funds to purchase it as a wise investment in your institution’s future. There is also a Small Museum Toolkit blog with additional useful information: http://smallmuseumtoolkit.blogspot.com/.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Erin Rickman has joined the staff of the Ohio Historical Society as the administrative assistant in the Education & Outreach Division. Local historians and Alliance members will come to know Erin well, as she is responsible for many administrative duties in the Local History Office, including processing Alliance memberships, Alliance regional and annual meeting registrations, historical marker applications, and “other duties as necessary.” She recently re-entered the workforce after a short break to spend time with her now ten-month old daughter, Maya. She is a graduate of The Ohio State University with a B.A. in French. As a child, she frequented the Ohio Historical Society, and is looking forward to spending time there daily. Erin started May 14 and replaces Bonnie Such, who retired in March 2012.

The Ohio Local History Alliance is sad to report the passing of Henry Robert Burke on May 5, 2012. Mr. Burke received an Alliance Outstanding Individual Achievement Award in 2009. An indefatigable researcher and teacher, much of what is known about the Underground Railroad in the mid-Ohio and Muskingum River valleys is because of his work. He curated an exhibit about the Underground Railroad at the Belpre Historical Society’s Farmer Castle Museum and is the author of four books and hundreds of newspaper articles. He hosted a website about his research and gave presentations about the Underground Railroad and slavery in antebellum Virginia. He also was responsible for the erection of seven Ohio Historical Markers tracing a route of the Underground Railroad from Marietta to Coshocton. He is survived by his wife Terri and seven children. His memorial service was May 11 in Belpre.

Tom Hilberg has resigned as curator of the Medina County Historical Society after 15 years in that position. He served as a member of the Ohio Local History Alliance Board as a Region 3 representative from 2006-2009. He will continue to volunteer for the Society.
Local Historical Societies Inspired (Not Expired) at the 2012 Regional Meetings

At the Region 1 meeting at the Stryker Area Heritage Council, Pete Wilhelm gave a talk about Native Americans in Northwest Ohio. The talk featured leaders such as Pontiac, Tecumseh, Little Turtle, and John Logan, who is the only Native American buried with full U.S. military honors in Ohio. Attendees also learned that the only county in Ohio without any documented Native American mounds is in Region 1 – Henry County. Photo courtesy of the Stryker Area Heritage Council.

Every regional meeting includes a tour of the hosting organization. Stryker Area Heritage Council President, Terry Perkins, led the tour of the Council’s depot museum. Photo courtesy of the Stryker Area Heritage Council.

The Region 1 meeting also included a roundtable led by Joy Armstrong, Ohio Local History Alliance trustee-at-large and director of the Sylvania Historical Village, and Janet Rozick, a regional representative from the University of Toledo Department of History. They led a discussion of common challenges faced by local history organizations and inspiring solutions. Photo courtesy of the Stryker Area Heritage Council.
The Region 3 meeting was in Berea. Here, Danielle Sharron and Catie Hewitt, from Baldwin-Wallace College, present during the session, “Inspired by the Expired: Local History Projects and Programs and Cemeteries.” Photo courtesy of the Berea Historical Society.

Every spring for at least thirty years, Ohio's local historians have gathered at Ohio Local History Alliance regional meetings to learn from each other and experts in the field. This year, the meetings attracted 293 local historians—up from 2011’s total of 267. The theme of 2012’s Regional Meetings (and of the upcoming annual meeting October 5-6) is “Inspire or Expire: How to Remain Relevant in the 21st Century.” At each of the nine meetings, sessions explored how local historical societies can remain true to their missions, yet adapt to changing times—for history is indeed the study of change over time. A few meetings took the theme literally. An example: the Region 3 meeting at the Berea Historical Society hosted a session titled “Inspired by the Expired: Local History Projects and Programs and Cemeteries.”

Dr. Indira Gesink, Chair of the Baldwin-Wallace College Department of History, talks about the Adams Street Cemetery Project during a session on creating mutually beneficial internships. The students gained experience using professional historical research methods. The Berea Historical Society gained an exhibit and a walking tour brochure. In addition to a great exhibit and interesting walking tour, the community gained an online searchable database of those buried in the cemetery. Photo courtesy of the Berea Historical Society.

Lunch time at each regional meeting is also Sharing Time. One person from each organization represented at the meeting gets two minutes to talk about what that organization has accomplished in the past year and what they are planning for next year. Photo courtesy of the Berea Historical Society.
Thanks to Hosts of the Alliance’s 2012 Regional Meetings

Helpful Hints for Successful Partnerships

By Jackie Barton, Director, Education & Outreach, Ohio Historical Society, Columbus

More than just buzzwords, these point to the power available in sharing resources with other organizations to reach shared goals. If you are feeling a little stagnant in your outreach—or just getting started, the tips below should give you a little food for thought.

1. Nothing worth having is easy. Partnership can be complicated and difficult. It can really pay off, but it takes work: calling, emailing, attending meetings, staff time, funds, and more can be needed. Therefore, be thoughtful about what partnership you enter with whom: is it worthy?

2. It's all about who you know. Start with your existing good relationships and those you respect and trust. Try to do an informal “reference check” on possible new partners to screen any issues in advance.

3. Birds of a feather flock together. Who has similar collections, themes, focus, mission, or needs? Can you make a bigger impact or address an outstanding need together? For example: You have a great collection of 1800s political memorabilia. Who has a similar collection from the 1900s? You could combine forces for a presidential election year exhibit and programs.

4. Opposites attract. What are your needs and gaps, and what organizations could fill them? What are your strengths that could fit with another organization’s needs? For example: We make great experiences for visitors. Convention and Visitors Bureaus market to visitors. It’s a perfect match!

5. Good fences make good neighbors. When getting a project or partnership started, there comes a point when you have to talk about who brings what resources to the project. Put this in writing every time even if it is as simple as an emailed letter of understanding. For example: One of my funding partners had leadership turnover and tried to change the terms of a project. It was only because we had a signed contract that we were able to keep our project on track.

6. Honesty is the best policy. Be open and honest in creating the partnership, and be willing to be honest with partners about what is not working or needs addressing along the way. When you approach a partner with an issue, I recommend a call or visit over an email or letter. For example: If a partner is not pulling their weight as promised, talk with them about it and get a remedy in place. Document the conversation with a follow-up email summarizing what you decided together.

7. If you can't say something nice, don't say anything at all. Be honest in the partnership, but respect your partners when talking to others about the project. If there are issues, resolve them “in the family” and do not air them publicly. For example: Do not chat at the Alliance annual meeting about how your partner did not pull their weight in the project. Work out those issues during the project with the partner.

8. “It is amazing what you can accomplish if you do not care who gets the credit.” (Harry S. Truman) Give your partners credit generously and happily. The good will come back to you tenfold. There is no drawback to giving people credit, but if you obsess about getting credit for every little item you do, you come across as nagging and negative.

9. Sometimes one is not the lone-liest number. It is okay to pass on a partnering opportunity when you are too busy, the potential partner has a bad track record, the project is outside your mission, etc. For example: I turned down being part of a national grant application once because I knew the person organizing the grant had a reputation of not following through, and we did not have the ability to run the administration of the project.

10. “You gotta know when to hold ‘em, know when to fold ‘em, know when to walk away, know when to run.” (Don Schlitz) Take time to assess existing relationships and partnership projects, and do not be afraid to change the terms or to end a partnership. You have limited resources: guard against efforts that do not pay off.

In 100 words or less, do you have outstanding news to share about your organization? Please email it to your regional representative for the next issue of The Local Historian. Contact information for the representatives in your region is on page 2 of this issue. Of course, you are welcome to forward your news directly to the editor of The Local Historian at arohmiller@ohiohistory.org. Rather than serving as a calendar of events, items for News from the Regions are chosen with the intention of inspiring, connecting, and educating the Alliance’s members all over Ohio and celebrating notable and imitation-worthy accomplishments of Alliance members.

Region 1
Allen, Defiance, Fulton, Hancock, Hardin, Henry, Lucas, Putnam, Van Wert, Williams, and Wood Counties

Fort Meigs received a $24,550 grant from the Martha Holden Jennings Foundation to create a new outreach program using iPad technology. SimMarch 1812 will let students participate in a virtual march in 1812 and gain a better understanding of what “life in the field” was like for Ohio militia during the War of 1812. For more information, visit www.fortmeigs.org.

Region 2
Ashland, Crawford, Erie, Huron, Marion, Morrow, Ottawa, Richland, Sandusky, Seneca, and Wyandot Counties

Region 3
Cuyahoga, Lake, Lorain, Medina, and Summit Counties

The Lorain County Historical Society opened its new Lorain County History Center on May 11. The society adapted the Starr House, a historic mansion originally slated for demolition, into a new self-guiding museum. The center contains seven new exhibit galleries, the Johnson Library, the society’s administrative offices, a new gift shop, and a significant amount of storage space for the society’s collections. One of the new galleries will be devoted to showcasing the collections of other historical societies in the county, the collections of local industries, and private collections. The new center is the result of a decade of planning and a successful $1.6 million capital campaign. For more information, visit www.lchls.org.

Region 4
Ashtabula, Geauga, Mahoning, Portage, and Trumbull Counties

The Mahoning Valley Historical Society and the Mahoning Valley Collecting Institutions Roundtable have published Local History Sourcebook: A Guide to Archives and Collections in Mahoning, Trumbull, and Columbiana Counties. The book is a guide for local history researchers and genealogists. It lists area museums, historical societies, and archives that give the general public access to collections. Each institution’s entry gives a brief history and a description of programs offered and collections held. Entries also include contact information, hours of operation, and any membership or copying fees. The Local History Sourcebook was funded by grants from the Ohio Humanities Council and the Community Foundation of the Mahoning Valley. View the book online at http://mahoninghistory.org/sourcebook/.

Region 5
Carroll, Columbiana, Harrison, Holmes, Jefferson, Stark, Tuscarawas, and Wayne Counties

The North Canton Heritage Society will be moving this fall from its current home at the former North Canton High School to a new location at the Portage Street School, due to the impending integration of kindergarten into the North Canton elementary schools. The society is raising funds to create a separate handicapped-accessible entrance to its new rooms. The Society has received grants from local foundations and is asking the general public to contribute to the project. Gifts of over $100 will be recognized on a plaque at the new entrance. For more information, contact the Society at 330-494-4791 or visit www.northcanton-heritage.org.

Region 6
Delaware, Fairfield, Fayette, Franklin, Knox, Licking, Madison, Perry, Pickaway, and Union Counties

Residents of the Little Cities of Black Diamonds microregion have a new way to engage with their community. The Little Cities of the Forest Collaborative, of which the Little Cities of Black Diamonds Council is a member, has launched a new Little Cities Volunteer Network. The network will publicize the many volunteer opportunities and service projects available through email and a regularly updated website. Posted activities are diverse, ranging from restoring historic buildings and archiving artifacts to improving the Buckeye/North Country Trail. All volunteer positions and projects are open to anybody with an interest in improving the region. For more information, go to www.littlecitiesvolunteers.org.

Region 7
Auglaize, Champaign, Clark, Darke, Greene, Logan, Mercer, Miami, Montgomery, Preble, and Shelby Counties

Region 8
Adams, Brown, Butler, Clermont, Clinton, Hamilton, Highland, and Warren Counties

The Butler County Historical Society dedicated its new Olive S. and Herbert T. Randall Research Center on April 28. The new center offers visitors a place to access all the resources of the society’s archives as well as Ancestry.com. With the additional space, the Society has created new exhibits in its Benninghofen House. These include an exhibit on the Benninghofen family and an exhibit on Hamilton industries.

Region 9
Athens, Gallia, Hocking, Jackson, Lawrence, Meigs, Pike, Ross, Scioto, and Vinton Counties

Bob Evans Farms has opened its newly renovated Adamsville Log Cabin Village exhibit, which relates the history of Appalachia and Southeast Ohio. The exhibit was originally located at the site of Adamsville, a village founded in 1800 along Raccoon Creek. Flood damage to the original exhibit prompted Bob Evans to move the exhibit to the farm and restore the cabins. The new Adamsville Village features a one-room school house, a cabin telling the story of the Underground Railroad, a pioneer home, an Appalachian Crafts cabin, and an early country store. In addition, Bob Evans Farms dedicated an Ohio Historical Marker to their founder on June 2. For more information, see www.bobevans.com/ourfarms/bobelevansfarms/farmhistory.aspx.

Region 10
Belmont, Coshocton, Guernsey, Monroe, Morgan, Muskingum, Noble, and Washington Counties

The network will publicize the many volunteer opportunities and service projects available through email and a regularly updated website. Posted activities are diverse, ranging from restoring historic buildings and archiving artifacts to improving the Buckeye/North Country Trail. All volunteer positions and projects are open to anybody with an interest in improving the region. For more information, go to www.littlecitiesvolunteers.org.

The 2012 Ohio Local History Alliance Annual Meeting and Conference, Inspire or Expire: How to Remain Relevant in the 21st Century, will be held Friday, October 5 and Saturday, October 6 at the Holiday Inn, Worthington. This year’s program includes over thirty inspiring sessions on topics such as volunteer management, creating exciting educational programs, developing successful partnerships with other organizations, and information on the brand new History Fund, the Ohio Historical Society’s first grant program for local history projects. In addition, the Society of Ohio Archivists will be holding their annual fall workshop on Friday, concurrent with the Alliance’s annual meeting. All attendees are invited to attend those sessions as well. Questions? Contact the Local History Office at 1-800-858-6878 or localhistory@ohiohistory.org. Watch for your annual meeting brochure, coming after August 1!

A highlight of each year is the Outstanding Achievement Awards Luncheon. The Alliance is now accepting nominations for the 2012 Outstanding Achievement Awards. Learn more on page 3. Remember the nomination deadline is August 1! Photos courtesy of the Ohio Historical Society.
